How You Can Help

Frequently we hear, read, or see evidence of the important role of the tropics in our global environment. Today's ever increasing pressures from people, and the plants and animals they introduce, threaten those fragile ecosystems and may profoundly affect the future. You can do something about this. We ask for your help to protect and learn from these invaluable treasures, either with a gift of money or of your time.

Contributions & Memberships

With your help, the National Tropical Botanical Garden can continue its critical work to protect tropical plant biodiversity. It is through the generosity of people like you that species that were down to a handful in the wild are now thriving in our gardens. Gifts from individuals have led to scientific discoveries that have helped these plants, and people, to survive. Private support has encouraged a sense of stewardship in the children of today who will care for our planet tomorrow. Please consider making a donation, or joining or renewing as a member. Your decision will have a lasting effect.

Simply visit our Contributions & Memberships webpage at give.ntbg.org, email donations@ntbg.org, or call (808) 332-7324, ext. 211.

Funding:

Primarily through contributions from individuals, foundations, corporations, and income from trusts and endowments.
